The Monthly Gazette

"The year's last, loveliest smile.
Thou com'st to fill with hope the human heart,
And strengthen it to bear the storms awhile,
Til winter's frowns depart."

~ John Howard Bryant, "Indian Summer"

Animal of the Month – Striped Bark Scorpion

The venomous striped bark scorpion, Centruroides vittatus, is distinctive due to its markings, which include (you guessed it) two dark stripes along the top of the body and a dark triangle on the head. Native to the South-Central U.S. and northern Mexico, these skilled climbers belong to Buthidae, the largest family of scorpions. Like other scorpions, they have eight legs; a long, flattened oval-shaped body with pincers in the front; and a curled tail with a stinger. In addition to several sets of lateral eyes at the front of the head, they also have a pair of median eyes in the middle of the head plate. Sensitive "hairs" on their legs and pincers, and comblike organs called pectines on their undersides help them navigate their surroundings and find prey, which consists of a range of insects, spiders, centipedes, and even other scorpions. To survive the winter, they enter a state of dormancy called diapause.

Flower – Chrysanthemum

These beautiful blooms, more commonly called mums, generally signify optimism and cheerfulness, but they can have different meanings depending on their color. For example, red signifies love, white represents truth, and yellow is the color for unrequited love. In parts of Asia, chrysanthemums have been used in teas and wines and are traditionally associated with health and longevity. In North American tradition, mums symbolize friendship and are a lovely gift to bestow on your best pals.

Birthstone – Yellow Topaz

Topaz likely gets its name from the Red Sea's Island of Topazios (now called Zabargad). Pure topaz is colorless, but trace imperfections in its crystal structure can produce shades of yellow, brown, pink, red, and blue. Imperial topaz, which ranges from reddish orange to orange-red, is one of the gem's most valuable color varieties. The ancient Greeks associated topaz with strength and believed it was capable of granting invisibility in times of emergency.
