

Keeping Strength and Mobility Top of Mind – A Fall Can Be Really Bad News

If you're 65 or older, it's very important for you to remain upright. Being a resident at one of our communities means you have access to a tremendous amount of wellness classes, exercise groups, and many ways to keep your strength top of mind.

Falls are a common danger facing people as they age, and a new study shows the importance of avoiding that first one.

The findings, published this week in Annals of Emergency Medicine, showed that more than half the seniors who went to the emergency room (ER) because of a fall either had additional falls, had to be hospitalized, or died within six months.

"Our study shows an even higher rate of adverse events than previous studies have," said lead study author Jiraporn Sri-on, MD, of Navamindradhiraj University in Bangkok, Thailand.

Role of medication

And if an older person happened to be taking psychiatric medication or a sedative, he or she was even more likely to quickly suffer fall-related adverse effects.

"This is concerning because these types of drugs are commonly prescribed for elderly patients in community and residential care settings," Sri-on said.

The study looked at patients 65 or older who were treated in the ER for injuries as the result of a fall. It found that a small minority -- 7.7% -- developed adverse events within a week. For most, it took a little longer for other problems to develop. More than 20% reported additional issues within 30 days while 50% suffered an additional setback within six months.

The statistics

Within that period, 22.6% had at least one additional fall, 42.6% had to revisit the ER, 31.1% required a hospital stay, and 2.6% died.

Sometimes, a fall by an elderly person is caused by an underlying medical condition. The fall is simply a symptom of a larger problem.

But the researchers say medication no doubt plays a significant role in raising the risk. They say besides taking psychiatric drugs or sedatives, patients taking five or more medications were more likely to suffer a fall.

The study concludes that ER personnel have a huge opportunity to reduce the adverse event rate among older patients who have fallen. A simple step, the researchers say, would be to follow existing fall guidelines and educate older patients on safety steps to reduce future falls.

Ann Swank

Getting to know.... Ann Swank

You can always find Ann working on a challenging puzzle! I asked for her thoughts about life, work and Bear Creek!

I asked her about her family... "Well, I have 4 children, 3 boys and 1 girl. Their personalities are so different. My oldest is really intelligent, my 2nd became a surgeon, my daughter has 3 beautiful kids and my son is in Florida. I have 12 Grandkids altogether; they each had 3 kids!"

I knew Ann was a nurse for many years,,,"I've worked in a NYC hospital, then we moved so I worked in a Washington DC hospital. I worked Shock/Trauma which was very challenging but very fulfilling, helping young lives. My specialty was Cardiac Surgery. I saw many open heart surgeries and to see the way people's hearts can be fixed and live long lives was so amazing. That was so rewarding. I enjoyed it so much.

I asked Ann about Bear Creek..."I really do like it here. Frankly, everyone has something that makes life difficult for them, we all have our challenges, and it's interesting to see how people here are living and doing well. I'm close to my daughter. I'm happy here and enjoy doing what I want to do."

Why We Get Our Flu Shots in the Fall

With the 2017 flu season just around the corner, you've probably already started getting inundated with reminders to get your flu shot. But why do we get the flu vaccine in the fall? And why do we have a flu season in the fall and winter, anyways?

The answer to the first question lies within the latter. Flu vaccines are recommended ahead of whenever flu virus activity and infections are on the rise, which is typically when the weather gets cold. For example, in the U.S., flu season dates can last from October through May, usually peaking between December and February, according to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC). Furthermore, the strains of flu virus that are most prevalent change from year to year, which is why new flu vaccines must be formulated almost annually.

The reason that vaccination campaigns begin as early as late August is because it actually takes a while for the flu shot to kick in. "It takes about two weeks after vaccination for antibodies to develop in the body," according to Vaccines.gov. "In the meantime, you are still at risk for getting the flu. That's why it's better to get vaccinated early in the fall, so you are protected before flu begins spreading in your community."

Even if you don't get a flu vaccine before October, as is considered ideal, public health officials recommend that everyone aged 6 months and older-including pregnant women in any trimester, and those with compromised immune systems such as small children and the elderly, get their seasonal flu shots in order to protect both themselves and those around them.

While Americans are pretty bad at getting their flu shots, public health experts tout their efficacy. Flu vaccine effectiveness can vary widely from year to year since scientists essentially have to try and predict which strains will be most prevalent, but is generally found to reduce flu illness risk by 40% to 60%. The most common side effects are soreness around the injection site, headache, fever, nausea, and muscle aches, and are generally mild.
