Laughing is the best Medicine...

Patient:
It's been one month since my last visit and I still feel miserable.

Doctor:
Did you follow the instructions on the medicine I gave you?

Patient:
I sure did - the bottle said 'keep tightly closed.'

SPOTLIGHT RESIDENT....

Chuck is all smiles when asked if he remembers the day he received the call that changed his life.

Before being signed by the Cardinals in 1961, Chuck Taylor had attended Middle Tennessee State University. During a MTSU baseball practice he was called to the phone, that call changed everything for this small town boy from Deacon, Tennessee.

Chuck spent three years (1961 to 1963) in the Cardinals minor league system before being traded on February 17, 1964 to the Houston Colts with first baseman/outfielder Jim Beauchamp for outfielder Carl Warwick.

Midway through the 1965 season, he was traded back to the Cardinals, this time with pitcher and former All-Star Hal Woodeshick.

1968 was perhaps the best season of his entire professional career. As a starter, he appeared in 34 games for the Oilers, allowing only 202 hits in 230 innings, walking only 38 batters, and posting a record of 18 and 7 with a minute 2.35 ERA. At 26 years of age, he was fairly old prospect-wise, but he still managed to impress the Major League Cardinals enough to put him on their roster for 1969.

On May 27, 1969, Taylor made his big league debut with the Cardinals. He appeared in relief of pitcher Ray Washburn, and it was ultimately Taylor who gave up the winning run to the opposing team, the Atlanta Braves. Taylor was used both as a reliever and starter in his debut season, appearing in 27 games total, starting 13 of them, and posting a 7-5 won-loss record.

His next two seasons, 1970 and 1971, proved to be successful as well. Both years, he was used almost entirely as a reliever, and he posted ERAs of 3.11 and 3.53, respectively. Following the 1971 season, Taylor was traded to the Mets.

In March 1973, Taylor was released by the Brewers and signed by the Expos a couple weeks later. In his first year with the Expos, he posted a 1.77 ERA, but appeared in only eight games. That performance, however, was something of a foreshadowing of what would happen in the year to come.

1974 was the best season of his Major League career. He appeared in relief 61 times, posting a 2.17 ERA in 107 2/3 innings. He ranked ninth in the league in game appearances, fifth in the league in saves with 11 and sixth in the league in games finished with 39.

He wrapped his career up following the 1976 season, playing in his final big league game on October 3 of that year. However, during the baseball season he enjoys watching or listening to the games and always enjoys sharing baseball stories.
