EMPLOYEE STAR AWARDS

Do you know there is a way of complementing our employees?

Our Star awards, yes, all you have to do is ask our receptionist or any of our department heads for a star award form. You can fill it out or have someone fill it out for you then sign it and place it in the container in the lobby. That’s it!

So if you see one of our employees going above and beyond what is expected of their job duties, please make sure to put a star award in for recognition, they may win a prize or money for doing a job well done.

Our star awards meetings are held each quarter for recognition.

Thank you for your participation and support!

Honoring Our Veterans

Veterans day originated as “Armistice Day” on November 11, 1919, the first anniversary of the end Of World War I. Congress passed a resolution in 1926 for an annual observance, and November 11 Became a national holiday beginning in 1938. This the day to give thanks to living veterans who Served their country honorably during war or Peacetime.

THANK YOU VETERANS!

Champion of Chimpanzees

Chimpanzees and humans share 98.5% of the same DNA.

Jane Goodall had no formal training in animal behavior or anthropology when she ventured into the African jungle in Tanzania, East Africa. She simply wanted to observe chimpanzees in the wild. What she discovered on November 4, 1960, changed the way humans view animals forever. For the first time, a human witnessed another animal use a tool of any kind. In this case, a chimpanzee used a twig to extract termites from their mounds. Humans are called Homo sapiens, which means “man the toolmaker.” Goodall’s discovery forced the scientific world to reconsider the idea that tool-making is not unique to humans. After a lifetime of being a champion of chimpanzees, there maybe no better-known chimp expert than Jane Goodall, who at her start, wanted nothing more than to be alone with the chimps.

Flew the Coop

On November 24, 1971, an airline passenger traveling from Portland to Seattle handed a note to a flight attendant that read, “I have a bomb in my briefcase. I will use it if necessary. I want you to sit next to me. You are being hijacked.”

Robert Rackstraw is now a retired university instructor living in San Diego, California.

So begins the legend of D.B. Cooper, the mysterious man and the center of the FBI’s only unsolved case of air piracy. D.B. Cooper was not his real name. He used the name Dan Cooper to purchase the ticket but a reporter erroneously dubbed him D.B. The crew eventually complied with Cooper’s demands. They landed the plane in Seattle, where he was given $200,000 and four parachutes. Then the jet took again to the skies with a skeleton crew headed for Reno, Nevada. But Cooper never made it to Reno. While flying over southwest Washington, the crew was alerted that the rear stairs had been opened. When they checked the back of the plane, they discovered that Cooper had jumped out, wearing a parachute and holding the $200,000. Cooper was never seen again, and treasure hunters have scoured southwest Washington ever since, hoping to find the loot and uncover Cooper’s true identity.

This past June, a team of FBI investigators made a startling announcement. They believed that they had uncovered Cooper’s true identity. After analyzing a series of letters allegedly written by Cooper in the months following the skyjacking, investigators think that he was a Special Forces paratrooper and Vietnam veteran named Robert Rackstraw. Rackstraw was eliminated as a suspect by the FBI in 1979, yet the FBI has safeguarded evidence pointing to Rackstraw ever since. Rick Sherwood, an Army specialist in code cracking, believes that Rackstraw sent coded letters to various newspapers in the months following the heist, egging on investigators. Both the writing style and the codes point to other codes known to be Rackstraw’s. Whether the FBI reopens the case against Rackstraw remains another yet-to-be-solved mystery.
