FOREVER FIT TOPIC – You Can

The stress of that past few months has been a heavier load than many of us have ever had to bear. So many unknowns that seem to keep growing by the day leave us with restless mind and an exhausted body. Now more than ever how we manage this stress can directly impact our health and well-being. Finding positive outlets that bring us a greater sense of calm are key to maintaining peaceful mind and a strong body. Low-impact rhythmic exercise, calming meditation & deep breathing techniques and even listening to soothing music all help to all help to lower cortisol levels in the body and boost the immune system. At a time when so much is out of our control dedicate a few minutes every day to embrace the things you can. Acknowledge those things that weight heavy on your mind but let your true focus be on the things that bring you joy. Take the extra time to slow down, breathe and allow yourself to find a personal sense of calm.
