

Benefits of Touring Our Community

Maybe you're excited about getting to see your potential new home in person. Or, perhaps you're a little apprehensive. Going on a tour can bring up a lot of emotions — excitement, uncertainty, encouragement, fear.

But there are many excellent reasons to schedule a visit. It could put your mind at ease after seeing all the residents laughing with our team members, or getting to view the clean and spacious apartments. Here are some reasons to pick up the phone and set up a day and time.

1. You get a feel for the environment.

We all want to live in a place that feels like home, even if that means something different to each of us. That's why most people would never purchase a house without going to look at it first. When you visit our community in person, you can walk through the hallways, see the apartments, and get a feel for the environment. Is this somewhere you can see yourself living?

2. You can meet the people who work here.

Because you'll see them every single day, the people who work in our senior living community are an important part of the decision-making process. Meeting them face-to-face gives you the chance to see what it might be like to interact with these new friendly faces day in and day out.

3. You can taste the food.

Food plays an important role in our daily life, and that doesn't change just because you move into a senior living community. When you go on a community tour, you can look at the menu options, sneak a peek at the dining room and maybe even have a meal. That's way better than settling for pictures in the brochure.

4. You can meet other residents.

Everyone has a different reason for choosing to move into a community. Some seniors make the transition to widen their social circle. Visiting our community in person will allow you to meet the people who might be your future neighbors. Do they seem like people you would get along with? Do you have things in common?

5. You can ask more questions.

Even if you've done your research and made a list of questions to ask when you tour our senior living community, you may find yourself with new questions as you walk through the halls and common rooms. Touring in person lets you ask us questions naturally as they arise, hopefully giving you a more comfortable feeling than you would get online or over the phone.
