EVERGREEN HOUSE RIBBON CUTTING AND GRAND OPENING

Residents and staff of The Village at Summerville gathered on Friday, December 3, to dedicate its newest addition: Evergreen House.

Evergreen House is the only memory support neighborhood of its kind in the nation. A freestanding building,

Evergreen House is uniquely designed to provide a supportive and engaging environment using the Montessori for Aging and Dementia philosophy. Evergreen House originated from a partnership with Jennifer Brush, MA, CCC/SLP, and Jennifer Brush is the only trainer in the United States certified by the Association of Montessori Internationale (AMI) for Montessori for Aging and Dementia and one of two trainers in the world with this exclusive expertise. With the focus on creating the highest standard for memory support and in conjunction with Brush, PCSC enlisted McMillan Pazdan Smith Architects to create this state-of-the-art setting.

During the service of dedication, Chaplain Achim Daffin and Chaplain Assistant Bo Hamilton blessed the hands of the new Evergreen House staff. The garden area was dedicated to the glory of God and in memory of Barbara L. Green by her husband, Clif Green, and daughter Susan Green-Grove. Presbyterian Communities also recognized the generosity and legacy of Clif Green who passed away on August 26, 2021.

REMEMBERING THE FUTURE AND LIVING INTO IT

The COVID-19 pandemic has presented many challenges to organizations in the senior living field like Presbyterian Communities of South Carolina. Of course, these challenges have waxed and waned in intensity over the last two years, and you are probably familiar with many of them: the need for PPE, delivery of vaccines, staff recruitment, supply chain problems, visitation oversight, and so on.

Attending to these challenges has been hard work that continues to demand a lot of time and energy from our staff at all levels. But another and more subtle challenge lies beneath. This is the temptation to spend all of our energy and time on the urgency of the present moment, such that the need to plan for the future and develop into it is forgotten.

I am glad to tell you that PCSC has not given in to the temptation to lose sight of the future. Despite all the challenges of the pandemic, we have continued not only to think about the future but also to grow into it.

During some of the most challenging days of dealing with COVID, we made plans for new construction as well as refurbishment of existing buildings. Last year we started construction on Evergreen House, our new Montessori memory support household at The Village at Summerville. This was completed in December, and now we are enriching life for dementia-challenged seniors at this campus in a way we never could before. Extensive renovations of the common spaces in assisted living at The Village were also begun last fall and will be completed by this spring.

We also started construction for a new wing of independent living apartments at the Foothills Community in Easley. Demand for these units, even in the pandemic, was such that they were all pre-sold before construction even started. New residents we could not otherwise have served will be moving into their new homes in February.

We have other construction and renovation starts planned for 2022. But expanding and renewing our physical properties are not the only ways we are growing into the future. We are continuing to develop our presence on social media (you can follow us on Facebook, Twitter and LinkedIn) to better share the wonderful things going on at PCSC's communities. And we are building our information technology assets. Our IT staff has expanded, and we have made significant investments in new hardware and software. These improvements are making PCSC more efficient and are providing for better data management.

The developments described above testify that PCSC has not stopped growing into the future. The immediate demands of COVID are ongoing, and we have yet to know exactly how or when the pandemic ends. But while we are ready to meet its challenges as long as it lasts, we are also ready to serve our residents with strength and vision when it is over.

TOGETHER, WE HAVE A GREATER IMPACT FOR GOOD

God calls us to community. Most days that feels like a no-brainer, but I'd imagine many of you have felt distant from your own communities in the last two years. I know I have.

Something I have learned from growing up in the church is that we are definitely better together. The same is true about our resources. When we come together to support something we are passionate about, the impact is far greater than if we were to go at it alone. For instance, most congregations cannot serve every person experiencing homelessness in their city, but ten churches or even the Presbytery could come together to build a resource center.

Former Co-Moderator of the General Assembly of the PC(USA), the Rev. Jan Edmiston, said:

“ I'd say that the best reasons to share money with others are:

Jesus.

Grace. Because we are the beneficiaries of grace, we are called to offer grace to others. Sometimes that's about financial support.

Partnerships. Pooling our resources to have greater impact for good.

Gratitude. We share because we have been blessed. ”

The ability to provide charitable care to seniors who have outlived their life's savings through no fault of their own captures all of her points. We are only able to do this because of our partnerships with folks like you. The churches and individuals who support our mission enable Presbyterian Communities to offer grace to others. Because we have been blessed, we can be a blessing to others.

Since our doors opened, our mission has been about caring for people as Jesus did. Just before Jesus was crucified, He washed His disciples' feet. When he was finished, he said, "So if I, your Lord and Teacher, have washed your feet, you also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have set you an example, that you also should do as I have done to you" (John 13:14-15).

Our faithful employees care for those who call Presbyterian Communities home with the same care and compassion as Jesus. When we come together to support this mission, the impact continues to bless folks for generations. The ministry of charitable care must continue. Will you partner with us to be a blessing?

staff from the PCSC Management Services Office gathered to celebrate.

Executive Director of The Village at Summerville Tim Barresi opened the ceremony with an explanation of the Montessori philosophy and remarks on the building design. “While many people are familiar with the Montessori method for teaching children, we now know that the Montessori method works wonderfully well with memory-challenged seniors,” said Barresi.

PCSC President and CEO Franklin Fant recognized the special guests in attendance and remarked, “Evergreen House is the final jewel in the crown for The Village, our oldest and largest Presbyterian community.”

Fant then offered a prayer and the ribbon cutting followed. After the ceremony, the guests enjoyed the opportunity to meet with the Evergreen House team and a tour of the neighborhood.

PCSC is grateful for the willingness of these individuals to invest in its work and looks forward to their leadership in the years ahead.
