I am Thankful for YOU!

I am very happy to announce you will be seeing some changes in our Covid 19 virus mitigation precautions. These changes will be based on community transmission levels being in the less than high category. Moving forward, masks will not be mandatory for staff and visitors except when transmission levels increase to the "high" category. Transmission rates are determined by the CDC and will be communicated to you by Clover Ridge when entering the community. We continue to ask for your patience and adhere to basic infection control, social distancing, hand hygiene, and staying home if you are ill. This will protect all of our vulnerable loved ones. Self-screening for symptoms is still required upon entry into our community. This is great news for everyone! Our residents will now get the chance to see our faces, and smiles. Many of our residents have never gotten the chance to see what we look like without a mask covering our faces! If you still prefer to use a mask, Clover Ridge will continue to supply complimentary masks for staff and visitors to use while in our community! Let's all take a minute and think about what we have to be thankful for in November! Mine is definitely being able to shed our masks!

From our Kitchen to you!

Tis the season to be very busy, sometimes we tend to get all caught up in the hubbub and busyness of holiday activities that it is easy to forget to count our blessings. Everyday is a blessing we can share with each other.

Some people focus on family traditions, others just go with the flow of new and trendy ideas. Whichever you like to do, just remember to enjoy each other and count your blessings.

Happy Thanksgiving!

Time Flies When your Having Fun!

Can you believe the year is almost over? With that being said, I want to remind everyone about safety with the winter weather fast approaching. Even a minor slip and fall can cause a major injury to an older adult. As people age, their bones lose elasticity and become more prone to breaking. A slip on an icy step can result in a traumatic brain injury, spine fracture, or a hip fracture. Slip and fall injuries can affect a senior's ability to live independently and care for themselves. There are some interventions that we can do to help keep our loved ones safe. First off, ensuring pathways are clear of snow and debris, regularly wiping up wet floors and throwing out or removing rugs from walkways. Keep frequently used items within reach. Medications, keys, remotes, eyeglasses should be within easy reach. Installing sturdy rails of support for staircases making sure there are no gaps, loose screws, or wiggles if your loved one feels unsteady. Wearing shoes while indoors is often frowned upon but may prevent a slipping risk to seniors. I hope you all stay warm, cozy, and safe during the winter months!

A Time of Thanksgiving

As I put our newsletter together it always takes me longer than expected. As I pull up the photos of the previous months activities and review what may be coming up in the months ahead it takes a lot of time to review each moment captured. This year has been especially important. We, as a team, have been trying to catch those moments, sometimes, I will admit, we get caught up in the moment of life and miss the photo opportunity to share. As I do this, review/preparation process, I am always reminded how much I enjoy the people around me every day and all the moments we get to share. At the same time, this process validates why and what we do every day. The moments created, the life lived, the memories made. They are priceless.

At this time of year as we reflect on what we are most thankful for. I too, am thankful for my family, health, and a place to call home. I am also thankful for all the families I get to be a part of, those that I work for and those that I work with. Every day I learn something new. I am given the opportunity to share in your life and be enriched by those around me.

Thank you all for allowing me this privilege and for being part of my story.

Happy Thanksgiving everyone!
