Plant of the Month – Fiddle-Leaf Fig

This popular house plant is native to West Africa. The fiddle-leaf fig can grow up to 10 feet tall indoors but can grow up to 60 feet outdoors. This tropical plant has lush, glossy, green leaves that resemble a violin or fiddle, which is how it got its name. Fiddle-leaf figs need a steady supply of sunlight, so it's ideal to place them by a window. However, if they get too much direct sunlight, the leaves could burn. It's also important not to overwater the plant because it likes to dry out a bit between weekly waterings. A symbol of fertility, abundance, new beginnings, prosperity, and growth, it's a popular wedding or housewarming present. It is also a favorite plant for practitioners of feng shui. While the stunning plant produces edible fruit, it is not sweet like a typical fig and tends to dry out the mouth, so it's typically not eaten. On rare occasions, the plant will also produce small flowers.

Flower – Gladiolus

The gladiolus represents strength and moral integrity—fitting given that its name comes from the Latin word for "sword," gladius. But while its sword-shaped stems might convey Roman gladiators, its flowers are capable of piercing a heart with their beauty. Because of this, the gladiolus symbolizes infatuation. Although beautiful in the garden, its chief value is for cut flowers. The flower's wide range of colors and sizes makes it ideal for flower arrangements.

Birthstone – Peridot

Peridot is a lovely green gemstone. Often mistaken for an emerald, it is also known as "the poor man's emerald." Peridot is one of the few gems found in only one color. The intensity of peridot's greenish hue can vary slightly, however, depending on how much iron it contains. Aside from being the birthstone for August, the peridot is also valued as the national gemstone of Egypt. In fact, some scholars believe that the emeralds worn by Cleopatra were actually peridots.
